Colclough Commands Freshmen, "Get the ball to the finish line"

Reverend Doctor Franklin Delano Colclough, Sr., part-time instructor in the MCMI-Advance Program, gave an uplifting and motivating speech as he addressed the Class of 2015 and the campus community on "Failure is not an Option" during the Freshman Class Assembly on Thursday morning.

Dr. Colclough front row, center, with President Richardson, left, Mr. Jones right, and officers of the freshmen class.

Colclough encouraged the freshman to look back at the many challenges they overcame as they transitioned from high school to college in the presence of "new found freedom." He stated, "You've learned self-discipline and hopefully how to balance academic life with social life."

As he gave examples of the many accomplishments the students have achieved, he gave an analogy, "The freshman year is like laying a foundation for a new house. You've come too far to be turned around the next three years. Failure is not an option."

Colclough encouraged students to do more than merely perform their tasks but to strive for academic excellence and visualize this as their reality. He advised, "Prepare yourself for service to a global village." Imparting insight to transition to this reality, Colclough said, "Seek to discern the unique gift that is in you. Reach out and take hold of God's hand and see what God will do with your hand." Colclough emphasized that each person, each student, has an individual purpose ordained by God that only he/she can fulfill. He advised, "You must cross the finish line. "Get the ball, carry the ball."

Dr. Luns C. Richardson gave closing remarks. He commended Mr. Joseph Jones, freshman class advisor, for the excellent program and the Morris College Gospel Choir for their performance. He applauded the freshman class for "a very well-planned and well-presented program. President Richardson complimented Dr. Colclough for "always being articulate, excellent and full of wisdom."

The president emphasized the importance of next Thursday's assembly as two important changes that will be effective August 2013 will be announced. All students, faculty and staff should be in attendance. The president is also encouraging parents to attend.
