Fine Arts Assembly Educates, Entertains and Enlightens

The Division of Religion and Humanities presented their Fine Arts Festival Assembly on Thursday morning. The program was a culmination to the celebration of 14 activities held during Fine Arts Week.

As always, the division delighted the campus community with theatrical performances, articulate oral presentations and the rich sounds of jazz.

Dr. Marc David, chairperson of the division, began the program with a recap of fine arts week, which included a culinary arts event. He shared that the diverse offerings of the food tasting has helped to make this event the campus' favorite.

The program included the division's history and a formal introduction of its fine faculty, staff, and student body.

The campus community was given a sneak preview through monologue of the stage play, "For Colored Girls". Individuals can see the play in the Neal-Jones Auditorium on April 18 -19.

Mr. Shawn Hair and Mr. Lorne Lee, instructors in the division, woke up the audience with instrumental performances on the keyboard and the trumpet, respectively, as they took us back in time to reflect on the rich history of the University of Timbuktu and its granted degrees: "Circle of Knowledge," "Superior Degree," "Secondary Degree," and the "Primary Degree."

The two transitioned smoothly through notes and rhythm, taking the campus community to a more recent era: the live performance of the incomparable voice of Marian Anderson as she gave a historic solo performance on Easter of 1939 at the Lincoln Memorial.

Closing the program with remarks, President Luns C. Richardson applauded the division for "A very excellent program – one of the best, put together by faculty, staff, and students." He also commended Dr. David, stating, "He is a fine person and a fine division chair."
